I Am MSU.

The first Sparty mascot was created in 1955 and was a papier-mâché head made by three fraternity brothers from Theta Xi Fraternity. It was 6 feet tall and over 60 pounds!

At the 1956 Rose Bowl Game, the Spartan head was replaced with a much lighter fiberglass head!

Many years passed with the Spartan head mascot, until 1982, when the head of the Alumni Association instructed their graphic designer to make a design of how Sparty should be portrayed. He gave the guideline to make it look more muscular than the sample picture of Wisconsin’s “Bucky Badger.”

The official Sparty mascot based on that design was introduced at Spartan Stadium on September 16, 1989! The crowd loved him, and ever since that day has been the face of MSU!
