Google’s Self-Driving Cars

Google’s driverless cars are predicted to drive better than any human. The company has spent this last year improving the cars’ ability to maneuver around the city streets—avoiding road blocks, constructions, and smoothly passing cyclists. “A self-driving vehicle can pay attention to all of these things in a way that a human physically can’t—and it never gets tired or distracted.” These cars are projected to be available around 2017!
